LAND ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

We should take a moment to acknowledge the land on which we are gathered. For thousands of years, this land has been the home of Patwin people.

Today, there are three federally recognized Patwin tribes: Cachil DeHe Band of Wintun Indians of the Colusa Indian Community, Kletsel Dehe Wintun Nation and Yocha Dehe Wintun Nation.

The Patwin people have remained committed to the stewardship of this land over many centuries. It has been cherished and protected, as elders have instructed the young through generations. We are honored and grateful to be here today on their traditional lands.

In Memory of Rodney Boon | 1967 - 2024

Rodney Boon began working for the Mondavi Center in 2011 with a background as a musician, touring sound engineer and tour manager working with bands in the 1990s and early 2000s. He was promoted to Head Audio Engineer in 2013. Over the years, he worked tirelessly to improve and upgrade the sound and sound control systems in both Jackson Hall and the Vanderhoef Studio Theatre, especially the Meyer Leopard speaker arrays that are hanging in Jackson Hall and strived to make our theatre spaces sound perfect for our patrons. In fact, whenever you hear the lobby chimes, know that he personally created and recorded them!

Rod was able to pass on his knowledge of touring and live sound mixing to our current Mondavi Center team and leaves behind a legacy of excellence and ensuring a superb patron experience for all who come to the Mondavi Center. He was also a great friend and mentor to all of us on the production team.

Rod’s impact to the Center cannot be overstated and his presence is felt every time you hear music in our venues. Our thoughts are with his wife, Melissa, and Rod will be greatly missed by those who knew him.

String Quartet No. 63 in B flat “Sunrise” (1797) – I. Allegro con spirito

JOSEPH HAYDN
Born in Rohrau, Austria, March 31, 1732
Died in Vienna, Austria May 31, 1809

This quartet was written at the end of Joseph Haydn’s active years as a composer as part of the last complete set of string quartets he wrote. This last set of quartets stands between the styles of the classical and the romantic era. Haydn achieved great success and international fame as a composer during his lifetime. However, his star had risen gradually. After enduring poverty and hunger as a choirboy in Vienna, he worked in that city as a freelance musician, performing and teaching while developing his abilities as a composer. After several minor positions, he took a job working at the Esterházy court, where he remained for nearly thirty years – time spent in London in the 1790s enhanced his international reputation.

This quartet earns its nickname from the beginning of the quartet where a rising theme played by the first violin gradually brings the quartet to life. There are hints of Haydn’s characteristic sense of humor in the sudden tempo changes. The middle section is darker, using the minor mode to explore the sunrise theme from the beginning. The ending returns to the sunrise theme again with fresh wonder, much as we do when the sun rises each day.

My Lord, What A Morning (1918)

TRADITIONAL, ARRANGED BY HENRY THACKER BURLEIGH
Born in Erie, Pennsylvania, December 2, 1866
Died in Stamford Connecticut, September 12, 1949

Henry Thacker Burleigh grew up surrounded by the music of the African American church. His maternal grandfather, who had purchased his own freedom from slavery in 1832, taught him spirituals. Many of his early performances were in churches and synagogues. Discrimination limited Burleigh’s ability to listen to and study classical music, but he was determined and creative. At one point, Burleigh secured a position as a doorman at a music venue to hear the concerts he wasn’t permitted to attend due to his race. In 1892, he earned a scholarship to the National Conservatory of Music in New York. At the Conservatory, he met composer Antonín Dvořák and performed spirituals for him. Dvořák declared that “In the negro melodies... I discover all that is needed for a great and noble school of music.” Dvořák wrote the theme for his ninth symphony, the “American” (1893), in the style of the spirituals he learned from Burleigh.

After graduating, Burleigh began working as a soloist for St. George’s Episcopal Church in New York City. At first, members of the congregation objected to a Black man singing in their church. However, Burleigh’s talent and quiet dignity won over the congregation, and he sang at the church for over fifty years. My Lord, What A Morning describes with longing the coming of the kingdom of God on Earth.

JAKE HEGGIE
Born in West Palm Beach, Florida, March 31, 1961

Jake Heggie began playing piano as a child and studied composition with Ernst Bacon as a teenager. He continued his education at the American University in Paris and UCLA before a hand injury caused him to turn his artistic energies entirely to composition. He is best known for his opera Dead Man Walking (2000), which was premiered by the San Francisco Opera and has since had more than 75 international productions. His music is characterized by lyricism and dramatic storytelling shaped through richly layered textures.

Earthrise is inspired by a photo that astronaut Bill Anders took of Earth as seen from the surface of the moon. The photo captures a luminous orb glistening in the abyss with the alien lunar landscape in the foreground. The image showcases the Earth’s magnificence, as well as its vulnerability. Spectral harmonics in the upper register open the piece as the Earth slowly rises in the lunar sky. A shimmering quality continues throughout, generating sonorities both alien and tender.

A World of Change (2023)

CLARICE ASSAD
Born in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, February 9, 1978

Brazilian American composer, arranger, pianist, and vocalist Clarice Assad blends jazz and classical music. The daughter of guitarist and composer Sergio Assad, she began playing music at a young age. In addition to her studies in Brazil, she also holds a Bachelor of Music from Roosevelt University and a Master of Music from the University of Michigan. Her more than seventy compositions include works for violin, piano, symphony orchestra, string quartets and guitar quartets, as well as arrangements of Brazilian songs and jazz standards. She was nominated for a Grammy in 2022 and has also received accolades for her composition, including an Aaron Copland Award and ASCAP’s Morton Gould Young Composer Award, among others.

A World of Change grew out of a larger project by the same name featuring Lara Downes and other collaborators. This piece alludes to global metamorphosis, disruption and rebirth, prompting audiences to consider their relationship... with our transformed world. The jazz-inflected soundscape calls to mind contemporary life, while the complex rhythmic variation furthers ideas of continuity and change.

String Quartet No. 8 in E, Op. 59, No. 2

(1808) – II. Molto Adagio

LUDWIG VAN BEETHOVEN

Born in Bonn, Germany, December 17, 1770

* Died in Vienna, Austria, March 26, 1827*

A product of Beethoven’s middle period, this quartet was the second of three string quartets that Beethoven was commissioned to write by the Russian Count Rasumovsky. Expansions of traditional forms characterized Beethoven’s compositions during this period as he broke away from the balance of the classical style, moving towards the towering masterpieces of unrestrained emotional intensity that would characterize the Romantic era. Many of Beethoven’s compositions were inspired by the natural world, most notably his sixth symphony, “Pastorale” (1808), composed in the same year as this string quartet. According to Carl Czerny, a friend and student of Beethoven, the second movement of this quartet was motivated by the stars in the night sky and the music of the heavenly spheres.

Beethoven places emotional demands on the players as the long, connected lines of the work seldom come to rest during this extended movement. The chorale-like beginning signals the celestial world of the stars. The lyrical expression contains moments of light as well as darkness cumulating with an exquisite outpouring of emotion. At the end the chorale returns anchoring the finale.

Under the Stars (1907)

AMY BEACH

Born in Henniker New Hampshire, September 5, 1867

* Died in New York, New York, December 27, 1944*

Although Beach is remembered today primarily as the first American woman to write and publish a symphony, Symphony in E Minor, Op. 32 “Gaelic” (1896), her first love was the piano.

In the charming miniature, Under the Stars for solo piano, there are no clouds in the night sky. Beach effectively uses color and mood in this reverie which sends us serenely off into the twinkling stars.

Deep River (1917)

HENRY THACKER BURLEIGH

By the 1890s, Burleigh composed his own art songs while continuing his career as a performer. In the 1910s, he began publishing the arrangements of African American spirituals, which he performed in concert, thus inventing the genre of the solo concert spiritual. His arrangements took the traditional acapella melodies and harmonized them with Western classical musical language. Deep River was published by G. Ricordi in 1917 and was a runaway success, receiving many performances by both Black and white singers who were captivated by the song’s message and haunting melody.

The success of Deep River prompted Burleigh to publish a collection of spirituals the following year in 1918. Burleigh’s arrangements always insisted on the dignity and religious content of the spiritual. In his instructions to performers, he wrote: “Through all these songs there breathes a hope, a faith in the ultimate justice and brotherhood of man ... the message is ever manifest that eventually deliverance from all that hinders and oppresses the world will come, and man – every man – will be free.”

Troubled Water (1967)

MARGARET BONDS

Born in Chicago, Illinois, March 3, 1913

* Died in Los Angeles, California, 26 April 1972*

Margaret Bonds was a pianist, composer and educator, as well as the first African American to perform with the Chicago Symphony. Her mother was a piano teacher who was well connected with Black classical musicians, including Will Marion Cook, Lillian Evanti, Abbie Mitchell and Florence Price. As a young woman, Bonds studied composition with Price and William Dawson.

Bonds found inspiration and refuge from the racist environment she faced as a student at Northwestern University in the works of other Black artists. One particular inspiration for Bonds was Langston Hughes’ poem The Negro Speaks of Rivers which she set to music. While studying at Northwestern, she came to national attention when she won the prestigious Wannamaker prize for her song Sea Ghost in 1932. After graduating from Northwestern, she sought further study at Julliard.

Bonds frequently drew on her African American heritage in her music, incorporating spirituals and jazz to create works that often had a social justice message. Troubled Water is a part of her three movement Spiritual Suite and is based on the spiritual Wade in the Water. Bonds combines Western classical techniques with call and response from the spiritual tradition and jazz harmonies to create a work that has proved popular with audiences.

La Création du Monde (1923)
DARIUS MILHAUD

Born in Marseilles, France, September 4, 1892
Died in Geneva, Switzerland, June 22, 1974

After studying at the Paris Conservatory, Darius Milhaud became associated with a group of French composers known as “Les Six.” Although not unified stylistically, these Avant-Garde artists were interested in advancing French music, and the hottest new thing on the scene was American jazz. Milhaud heard his first live jazz performance in London in 1920. When he traveled to New York in 1922, he made a special effort to attend live jazz performances and spent time in Harlem listening to jazz. When he returned to Paris in the spring of 1923, he collaborated with the artist Fernand Léger and the writer Blaise Cendrars to create a ballet based on African creation myths, which evolved into La Création du Monde.

The piece is arranged into five sections. The first shows the universe before creation, swirling and dark, yet populated by hints of things to come. Milhaud combines jazz with the classical form of the fugue in the second section, the birth of plants and animals. The peaceful creation of man and woman quickly gives way to their livelier desires as they consummate their love. In the final section, many of the moods and ideas from the previous sections return, ending with a gentle kiss.

What a Wonderful World (1967)
GEORGE DAVID WEISS

Born in New York City, New York, April 9, 1921
Died in Oldwick, New Jersey, August 23, 2010

BOB THIELE

Born in Sheepshead Bay, New York July 27, 1922
Died in New York City, January 30, 1996

ARRANGED BY STEPHEN BUCK

Louis Armstrong first recorded this song in 1967, and his gravelly voice prevented this optimistic song from becoming saccharine. At the time, the country was in desperate need of a positive message as the United States faced difficult times at home and abroad with the Vietnam War, the Civil Rights Movement and the 1968 assassinations of Martin Luther King Jr and Robert F. Kennedy. The songwriters believed Louis Armstrong was the perfect person to bring a message of reconciliation and hope to their audience. However, this iconic record faced a difficult birth. The president of ABC Records, Larry Newton, objected to the pacing of the song. Armstrong had recently released a swinging pop hit for a rival company and Newton didn’t think the slow ballad could compete and had to be physically barred from the recording space to keep him from interrupting. Newton retaliated for being locked out by refusing to promote the song in the United States and it sold poorly when first released in 1967. Despite a slow start, the song became a standard and won the Songwriters Hall of Fame’s Towering Song Award in 2014. Today, this melody encourages us to look on the bright side and proclaim that ours is a wonderful world.

— ELIZABETH CAMPBELL was recently awarded a Ph.D. in musicology from University of California, Davis. She graduated from Indiana University in 2017 with master’s degrees in musicology and library science after completing a bachelor’s degree in music at Luther College in 2014. Her research interests include music in early twentieth-century America and Renaissance vocal polyphony. Her dissertation work was on Lillian Evanti (1890–1967), an African American opera singer who performed in Europe, the United States, and Latin America.
